

Zimmer to Market New Blood Management System

Aug 30, 2005

WARSAW, Ind., Aug 30, 2005 /PRNewswire-FirstCall via COMTEX/ -- Zimmer Holdings, Inc. (NYSE: ZMH; SWX: ZMH), a worldwide leader in the orthopaedics industry, confirmed today that Haemonetics Corp. will end its distribution agreement with Zimmer for the OrthoPAT Blood Management System. Zimmer says it will pursue internal and external development of what it believes will be superior blood management systems based on technology already identified.

"We are disappointed that Haemonetics chose this course given that we were growing sales at greater than 20 percent per quarter," said Ray Elliott, Zimmer Chairman, President and Chief Executive Officer. "We are very excited about our prospects in the blood management category, though, and we are moving aggressively to bring a new product to market."

Zimmer says that it plans to acquire or distribute blood salvage technology that will allow it to offer its customers an outstanding alternative to pre-donation of blood for joint replacement procedures at a lower cost than existing systems.

"We have tremendous history in the blood management arena, including tourniquet systems and the Hemovac(R) Autotransfusion System, and we plan to build on that strength to compete in this product segment," said Elliott. "We had excellent sales success with the OrthoPAT and we're confident that Zimmer's strength in key hospital accounts was the primary driver."
